The Hong Kong Institution of Engineers

香港工程師學會

The Engineering Society of Hong Kong was founded in 1947 with the aim of bringing together engineers of different Disciplines for their common good. The Society flourished and as a result the Hong Kong Institution of Engineers (the HKIE), was incorporated under the Hong Kong Institution of Engineers Ordinance, Chapter 1105 of the Laws of Hong Kong in 1975 and became the only statutory professional engineering body in Hong Kong. The HKIE has over 31,000 members, of which more than 14,000 are Corporate Members.

The Institution sets standards for the training and admission of engineers. As a qualifying body, the HKIE has 21 engineering disciplines, which include Aircraft Discipline, Biomedical Discipline, Building Discipline, Building Services Discipline, Chemical Discipline, Civil Discipline, Control, Automation & Instrumentation Discipline, Electrical Discipline, Electronics Discipline, Energy Discipline, Environmental Discipline, Fire Discipline, Gas Discipline, Geotechnical Discipline, Information Discipline, Logistics & Transportation Discipline, Manufacturing & Industrial Discipline, Marine & Naval Architecture Discipline, Materials Discipline, Mechanical Discipline and Structural Discipline. The HKIE has strict rules governing the conduct of its members. As a learned society, the 19 Divisions under the Institution regularly organise activities to keep members abreast of the latest developments in engineering and provide opportunities for continuing professional development. These Divisions are Aircraft Division, Biomedical Division, Building Division, Building Services Division, Civil Division, Control, Automation & Instrumentation Division, Electrical Division, Electronics Division, Environmental Division, Fire Division, Gas & Energy Division, Geotechnical Division, Information Technology Division, Logistics & Transportation Division, Manufacturing & Industrial Division, Materials Division, Mechanical, Marine, Naval Architecture & Chemical Division, Nuclear Division and Structural Division.

The Institution is very active in serving the community and participating in public affairs. We nominate our members to serve on various external boards and committees of government departments and higher education institutions, provide timely and constructive comments and professional advices on the government's consultation papers and attend committee meetings of the Legislative Council relating to engineering issues.

The HKIE has established close relationship with engineering institutions throughout the world. It has signed 23 agreements for reciprocal recognition of professional and technologist qualifications with engineering institutions/authorities and 23 agreements of co-operation with other organisations worldwide.

Apart from joining the World Federation of Engineering Organisations (WFEO) and the Federation of Engineering Institutions of Asia and the Pacific (FEIAP), the HKIE was also admitted to the Washington Accord as one of the signatories in 1995 and became a founding signatory to the Sydney Accord and a full signatory to the Seoul Accord in 2001 and 2009 respectively.
